

WHO TO CALL

Walking in wisdom as an advocate often means finding resources for our Global Partners when they have obstacles to finding them themselves. It is very important to be able to discern when to continue listening and when to seek out further help. Once you feel you are “out of your depth” and that the partner would benefit from additional resources, here are some suggestions.

Make sure to include your Regional Leader in the loop when you are reaching out to our Mission Hills Outreach staff. You don’t need to include all of the confidential details, but making them aware of the need will help the process advance more smoothly.

MARRIAGE

Ministry puts a large strain on marriages and problems are often ignored because resources are difficult to access and because it’s assumed that missionary marriages shouldn’t have problems. Or if they do, they assume trusting in Jesus should fix them. While your listening ear, empathy and encouragement can go a long way, if you feel like outside help is needed, here’s how to go about it.

Questions to ask before you contact anyone:

- Are you both willing to invite someone into the conversation that might be able to help?
- Are there resources from your sending organization that you feel comfortable accessing?
- Is it alright for me to ask Pastor Mauricio about resources we might be able to help you with?

Who to contact?

- Pastor Mauricio Carbone mcarbone@missionhills.org
